PREFACE

- Rex mical mon gecgan, ßune writan, leot gesingan, lofes gearnian. Dom arctcan, © $\mathfrak{D}$ ges onettan.'

' It is but the clondes gathered about our owne judgement that makes us thinke all other ages wuraft up in mistes, and the great distance betwixt us that causes us to imagine men so farre off to be so little in respect of ourselves.'
$\S I$.

N the year 107 I died Leofric, first Bishop of Exeter, sometime Chancellor of England, the friend and favourite of Edward the Confessor, a distinguished disciple of the Lotharingian schools. Contemporary accounts have come down to us describing the pomp which attended the bishop's installation; how, in the presence of the chieftains of the realm, supported by the king on his right and by the noble Eadgitha on his left, he ascended his episcopal throne in the ancient minster of St. Mary and St. Peter the Apostle. The minster, when it came into his possession, had been despoiled of its lands and of nigh all its ecclesiastical appurtenances; 'of twenty-six estates which the pious king Athelstane had conferred upon it scarce onc remained.' During the twenty years of his rule, Leofric's energies and wealth were devoted to the restoration of its former fortunes, and when he died he left it more richly endowed than it had ever been before. But he bequeathed to his cathedral-church something besides a magnificent rent-roll,-something even more precious. When he took office, the library at Exeter was in a pitiable condition; he found there nothing but five worthless scrvice-books; at his death it numbered no less than sixty volumes,-Bibles, servicebooks, homiletic literature, theological commentaries, and the chief classics of those days, to wit, the works of Statius, Prudentius, Prosper, and Bocthius. Leofric's library at Excter did not, it is true, number as many volumes as some of the rich Anglo-Saxon libraries of which we have record; it certainly did not rival Archdeacon Egbert's famous collection at York, that called forth Alcuin's enthusiastic praise :-

> - Ihic invenies veterum vestigia patrum, > Quidquid habet pro se Latio Romanus in orbe, Grecia vel quidquid (ransmisit clara Latinis; Hebraicus vel quod populus bibit imbre superno ;'
nevertheless, one item in the catalogue of Leofric's books places him in the first rank of our early bibliophiles, and has earned for him, or should earn for him, the undying gratitude of his countrymen. In the catalogue, which is extant, writ in choicest Anglo-Saxon, there is an entry which runs as follows :-
 xiv
i.e. 'A great English book on all sorts of subjects wrought in verse.' Happily, we have not to bewail the loss of the volume thus described. Exeter Cathedral still cherishes the possession of this most glorious relic of pre-Conquest literature. The 'Exeter Book,' the name by which it should be known to Englishmen all over the world, may well claim to be the noblest product of early Teutonic genius. True, it cannot boast of great beauty of work-manship,-it is not, like the 'Codex Argenteus,' written on purple vellum in letters of silver and gold; no wondrous miniatures adorn its pages, like the ' Book of Kells,' -' Angles,' not 'Angels,' wrought it,-but its contents claim for it a higher consideration than even the supreme philological interest of the former and the artistic glories of the latter. It has preserved for us a whole library of national literature, that would otherwise have been irrevocably lost ; it is in itself a 'bibliotheca' rather than a 'book.'

§ 2.

It is not my purpose on this occasion to dwell on the contents of the volume ; a study of the 'Exeter Book' would practically amount to a survey of old English poetry through all its varied vicissitudes, harking back to the songs that glee-men sang before the legions of imperial Rome surrendered Britain to its fatal conflict with barbaric Teuton. Fierce and brutal as were these pirate-hordes towards their foes, yet their harps were attuned to tender strains as they sang their sailor-songs of the dear ones left behind :-
> ' To the Frisian wife comes a dear welcome-guest ; the keel is at rest ; his vessel is come; her husland is home; her own cherished lord she leads to the board; his wet weeds she wrings ; dry garments she brings. Ah! happy is he, whom safe from the sea his true love awaits!' ${ }^{1}$

But, for the most part, the Anglo-Saxons took to their poctry very sadly. The prevailing note of the old English lyric is elegiac ; intense melancholy, harmonising with the gloom of Northern sea and sky, with the fatalism of their Pagan faith, is the one mood reflected in the subjective poems of the 'Exeter Book':-
'Ah! thou bright cup! Ah, thou mailed warrior ! Ah! the glory of my lord! Now has the time passed, darkened 'neath the veil of night, as if it ne'er had been. Where once loved warriors trod, now stands a wall of wondrous height, worm-eaten, grim; the might of the spears, slaughter-loving weapons, has swept away the chiefs, - theirs was a glorious fate, but storms lash the rocky slopes, and falling snowdrift binds the earth, and all the winter's terror, when the dark night falls

[^0]> with its black shadow, and summons from the north fierce storms, to the grievance of mankind.
> All the realm of earth is full of hardship, the world 'neath heaven is turned by fate's decree.'

This turn for melancholy is an abiding element in English poctry throughout its history; there can be little question that it is essentially an English characteristic, despite Matthew Arnold's oft-quoted dictum that it is altogether derived from Celtic source. But while the note of the old English lyric is elegiac, as far as its form is concerned it belongs to the epic,-the allabsorbing art-form of our oldest poetry. Epic dignity and distinction, not lyrical rapidity of movement, mark even the shortest of Anglo-Saxon songs.

And what better instrument for the grand epic style than the wondrous blank verse-the old alliterative line -of these ancient poets. Critics of Elizabethan literature delight to dwell on 'the mighty line' created by the greatest of Shakespeare's predecessors; but, ten centuries before Marlowe's genius impressed itself on the English drama, English poetry had already 'unlocked the secret of blank verse,' and had played upon 'its hundred stops.' The secret of Marlowe's great discovery lies in this, that he Teutonised the 'versi sciolti' imported from Italy, and unconsciously imparted thereto the flexibility and vigour that characterised the national metre used by the oldest of English poets, whose work has come down to [^1]us. The high seriousness and earnestness of old English poetry; its epic style, absorbing lyrical and even dramatic elements; its subjectivity and melancholy; its subtle power of thoroughly nationalising foreign materials; its rich vocabulary and phraseology; the wonder of its varying verse, expressive of every shade of human emotion : its artistic consciousness; its avoidance of anything approaching medirval grotesqueness,-all these qualities distinguish the remarkable poem which holds the first place in the Codex Exoniensis. This poem, which is probably the oldest Christiad of modern Europe, is herewith introduced to English readers, its text carefully studied and interpreted.

§ 3.

The text is based on the editor's unpublished edition of the Exeter MS., in preparation for the Early English Text Society. The variations from the MS, will be found in 'Critical Notes' at the end of the volume. ${ }^{1}$ The ms. has been followed minutely, not merely in the matter of spelling, but also as regards the divisions of the poem,--a matter of special importance hitherto neglected. Though there are no titles to the various passus, the scribe has clearly indicated the beginning of each by means of a long flourish of capital letters, distinguishing carefully the smaller sections from the main divisions. Thus, the ms. makes it certain that Passus III. begins with words ' Donne mid fere,' and does not include the previous section. External evidence corroborates this view. Appendix II. gives the source of Passus II. ; it is obvious that the final section of the passus is directly due to the final section of the homily. It is strange that Dietrich, who first called attention to the unity of the poem, and to the chief source of its second division, should have missed this point.

In Appendix I. I have printed fifty-eight lines hitherto regarded as part of the present poem, but most assuredly, if the original scribe may be credited, the opening lines of the 'Legend of St. Guthlac'; there is absolutely no break in the MS. between these lines and the passage usually printed as the first section of the latter poem. I make bold to suggest that the whole section is a prelude to 'St. Guthlac,' with motives derived from the concluding portion of the 'Christ.' Thorpe, the first editor of the Exeter MS., is no doubt answerable for this error, which even the ingenuity of Dietrich and Grein did not detect. ${ }^{1}$

[^3]Appendix III. is a valuable contribution made by Professor Cook to the sotrces of the poem, and may be regarded as affording external evidence in favour of the theory propounded above concerning the limit of the third passus. It remains but to point out that unfortunately the first part of Passus $\mathbf{1}$. is lost ; to give to the epic the appearance of completeness a single word has been omitted; the capital letter at the beginning of the text has no Ms. authority. ${ }^{1}$ The frontispiece has been added to the volume as a specimen of Anglo-Saxon art, illustrative of the subject of the second part of the poem; it belongs to the famous scries of miniaturcs that adorn the ' Benedictional of St. Æthelwold.' ${ }^{2}$ obscurities, or correcting the errors of a version, in this and all similar cases yet hnown, too paraphrastic to admit of compar son.'

In 1833 Dietrich called attention to the unity of the poems, but as he had no opportunity of examining the ms., he did not perceive the real state of aflais, though be and others might have inferred it from Wanley's description of the Ms. (v. page 280), where 'Passus' $1 .$, H., 111., are styled 'Liber' 1., 11., 111., though the connection of the ' 1 ibri' was not noted. In 1857 Grein's Dibliothet included the 'Clirist,' which was based on Thorpe's text. Grein accepted Dietrich's views on the subject of the poem, but printed it unnecessarily as one long poem, with twenty-two sections. In 1 837 appeared the same scholar's 'Dichtungen der Angelsachsen stabreimend uebersebzt.' Little has been done for the interpretation of the poem since Grein's monumental work, though the need of a new edition has been long felt. It is a strange fact that after itoo years and more the 'Christ' now appears for the first time as a separate volume. The translation which accompanies the text is the first attempt that has been made to interpret the puem as a piece of English literature.
${ }^{1}$ Cf. note 1. i. The initials at the commencement of Passus 1., 1., Hit., are taken from the Anglo-saxon Codex Palterii Lossi uns (Bodleian Library), as reproduced in l'rofessor Westwood's Facsimiles of Anglo-Saxon and Celis Miniatues.
${ }^{2}$ Reproduced in reduced facsimile hy Mr. Griggs, with kind permission, from the last-named hook, (v. page 132.)

Long and patient search has failed to discover the source of Passus 1.; this failure is especially to be deplored as one would much wish to know from what original the poet evolved the carliest dramatic scene in English literature, ( $v$. page i8.) What a contrast an Anglo-Saxon religious drama would have presented to the homely miracles and mysteries of later centuries! The original of the greater part of Passus I. must, I think, have been a Latin hymn-cycle, the 'Joseph and Mary' section being derived from an undiscovered hymn arranged for recital by half-choirs. The crude materials used for Passus in. and III., printed at the end of the volume, attest in a remarkable way the transforming power of the poet ; the well-sustained simile that closes Passus II. owes its exist. ence to the words in the last section of St. Gregory's Homily, 'Quamvis adhuc rerum perturbationibus animus fluctuet.' The passages in the Appendix form a valuable commentary to the greater part of the text.

§ 4.

The Exeter Ms. was written some time in the tenth century, or early in the eleventh; the bulk of its contents is, however, at least two centuries older. Its dialect is West-Saxon, or 'Anglo-Saxon,' as it is generally called, but one is able to detect in a number of the poems the fossil remains of another and an older dialect. Minute philological criteria lead to the conclusion, supported strongly by other evidence, that the first of the poems preserved in the codex, and many more besides, are Saxon (i.e. Southern) transcriptions of Anglian (i.e. Northern) originals. Wessex merely preserved the poems, Northumbria produced them. Indeed at no time in its history has Wessex been productive of poetical work; from the days of Alfred onward its special strength lay in prose literature. Did not Chaucer recognise the fact when he made his parson exclaim :-
> - Trusteth wel, I am a Sotherne man, I cannot geste, rom, ram, ruf, by my letter, And God wote, rime hold I but litel betler, And therefore if you list I wol not glose, I wol you tell a litel tale in prose.'

It seems almost certain then that the 'Christ' is an Anglian poem, written before Northumbria ccased to be the great centre of poctical activity, i.e. before the beginning of the ninth century, and critics are at one in placing the 'floruit' of its poet during the second half of the eighth century. The poet in question has bequeathed to us his name by a strange device; by means of mystic runes Cynewulf worked a subtle spell whereby his authorship of this and of three other poems is incontestably established. In an 'Excursus on Cynewulf Runes,' at the end of the volume, I have considered the many questions at issue concerning this important point. It remains but to add that I am sceptical on the subject of the supposed charade-character of the so-called 'First Riddle.' Interesting attempts have been made to write the biography of xxii the poct ; ${ }^{1}$ it is not my purpose in this place to attempt a similar task, which would involve a discussion of the whole problem of Cynewulf's relation to the extant remains of Anglo-Saxon poetry. In conclusion, I would apply to our poet the commendation bestowed by an old historian on one of Cynewulf's masters and predecessors, whose fame rests solely on his Latin verse, though he too composed in the vernacular :-

- ©mnium poctarum sui temporis facilé primus, tanta tloquentix majestatis et crubitionis foma fuit, ut nunquam satis admirari possim ande illi in tam barbara ar rubi atate facunbia accesberit, usque adea omnibus nunteris tersa, elegans, et rotunda, betsus edidit sum antiquitate de palma contendentes.' ${ }^{2}$

Forsooth in a'ery need we speak these wiords;
Him who created man we supplicate, that He elect not to declare in hate the doom of as who sad in prison here sit yearning for the sun's propitious course. When the Lord of life reiealeth light to us, be He the guardian-angel of our souls, and wreathe the feeble mind with radiant grace. May He glorify us thus, His facoured ones, when we must needs depart in abject plight unto this narrow land, bereft of home.

Verily he may say it, who speakcth truth, that when the race of man wias all depraied, He came and rescued it. Young wios the maiden, a damsel sinless, wikom He chose as mother. It came to pass without the lowe of man, that the bride was great by child-conception.
Never before or after in the world was any meed of woman like to that; it was a secret mystery of the Lord. All ghostly grace o'erspread the realm of earth, and many a thing became ilhumined then through life's Creator, teachings of ancient day'. which lay concealed beneath the weil of night, the sages' songs prophetic, ere the Ruler came, who speedeth on its course their every prayer, if mortals will but praise full earnestly their Maker's name, as wisdom biddeth them.

O sight of peace! holy Jerusalem! choicest of royal thrones! citadel of Christ! the native seat of angels and of the just, the souls of whom alone rest in thee ever. exulting in glory. No sign of aught unclean shall ever be bekeld in that abode, but every sin shall flee afar from thee, all curse and conflict; thou art gloriously full of holy promise, e'en as thou art named.
See now thyself how all the wide creation and heaven's roof surveyeth thee about, on every side, and how the King of heaven seeketh thee in His course, and cometh Himself, and taketh His dwelling in thee, as in days of yore soothsayers so wise declared in words; they made known Christ's birth; they told it for thy comfort, thou best of cities! Now the Child is come, awakened to destroy the Hebrewis' works; He bringeth thee joy; He looseneth thy bonds; He hath adventured Him for men; He knoweth their need,yea, how the wretched must await compassion.

[Mary.] 'Alas! now, Joseply mine, thou child of Jacob, scion of David's stock, the glorious King, must thou forthaith renonnce thy plighted troth, and leaze' my love?' [JOSEPH.] 'Too soon am I o'eraibelmed with grietous care; too soon bereft of honour. Forsooth throngh thee hate I heard many a word, many an agonising bitter taunt, many an insult, and they roile me now with words of bitter wrath. My' sonl is sad; I must shed tears. God may casily heal the grievous sorrow of my hart, and comfort me, forlorm. Alas, young damsel, Mary maiden!' [MARY.] 'Why' bemoanest thou, and criest aloud lamenting? Ne'er found I a fault in thee, or any cause of blame for evil done, and yet thou speak'st such words, as thon thyself wert filled with eiery sin and all transgression.' [JOSEPH.] 'Too much mistry' have I received from this conception. How can I escape the hateful words, or how can I find any ansuiter now against mine angry foes? 'Tis widdely knoz'n, that from the glorious temple of the Lord I joyfully received a maiden pure, immaculate; and now all this is changed, through whom I know not. Neither availeth me, to speak or to be silent; speak I the truth, then must David's daughter suffer death, slain with stones; yet 'tis a harder lot to conceal the crime, and to be doomed to live a perjurer, henceforth loathed by all the folk, accursed 'mong men.' Then did the maid unravel the mistery so true, and thus she spake:-

'Truly' I say, by' the Son of the Creator, the Saviour of souls, that yet I know not in conjugal communion any man anywhere on earth; but it auas granted me, while still a damsel young and in my home, that Gabriel, heai'n's archangel, bade me hail, and said in wery truth, that heaven's Spirit shonld with His ray illume me, that I should bear life's Glory, an illustrious Son, the mighty Child of God, the bright Creator. Now, without guilt, an I become His tomple; the Spirit of comfort lutht dwelt within me. Wherefore dismiss thou now all sorry care, and say eternal thanks to the Lord's great Son, that I became His mother, nathless a maidin still, and thou, I ween, art named His earthly' father, should the prophecy become fulfilled aright in Him Himself.'

O thou true Soiran, and thou peaceful King, ' thou King of all Kings, Christ Omnipotent! how wast thou, with thy glovious Father, aye existent before all the world's estates, a child begotten by His skill and might. There lizeth not a mortal under heaven, no man however wise, who is so wise, that he can tell unto the ocean-dwellers and expound aright, how the Warden of the skies took thee in the beginning for His noble chilld. Of all the things thut mankind hath e'er heard here upon earth, this thing first came to pass beneath the clouds, that God Omniscient, the Source of life, parted in sovran will the light from darkness, wielding His decree; and thus He , Lord of hosts, commanded then:-
' Let there be light for eier and for ever, a radiant joy for each of lizing men who in their generations shall be bom.'

And so it came to pass, when 'twas ordained;
a splendour shining bright amidst the stars lighted, through the course of time, the tribes of men.

Plead thou our cause for us with earnest words, that He may suffer us no longer here to list to Error in this wale of death, but that He lead us to the Father's realm, where sorrowless we may for evermore abide in glory with the Lord of hosts.

Hail, thou holy One, thou Lord of heaven, thou with thy Father wast from ancient time, co-eral in that noble home on high. As yet there was not any angel formed, nor any of the mighty hierarchies, that guard the kingdom in the skies above, the palace of the Prince and of His thanes, when thou together with the Lord eterne wast first ordaining all this wide creation, this broad expanse of earth. to shepherds the sure joy that there was born upon this middle-earth, in Bethlehem, the Son of the Creator; yet in books it saith not that they appeared then at that glorious tide in robes of white, e'en as they did anon when the great Leader in Bethania, the Lord majestic, called His band of thanes, the host beloved ; on that weleome day they slighted not the word their Teacher spake, their bounteous Dispenser. Then had He fulfilled the prophets' words, as they had sung before throughout the zuorld, yea, by His passion. His servants lauded Him, they praised all-lowingly the Source of life, the Father of creation! Then suddenly a sound was heard on high, loud in the air; a band of heacenly angels, a beauteous host, the messengers of glory, in legion came; our King departed thence, e'en through the temple's roof, where they behelet, they who were watching still the Dear One's track, His chosen thanes, there in that meeting-place; they saw their Lord, the Chilld dizine, ascend from earth into the heights; sad were their souls; their spirit's grief burned hot aithin their hearts,

Then was Glory's Guardian, the archangels' King, the Helm of holy men, bewrapt in clouds, high o'er the roofs. Joy was renezued and bliss in heaven's cities at the Prinee's coming; on His own Father's right-hand sat He down triumphant, the eternal Source of good.

Sad then in spirit, zevent the valiant men and journeyed to Jerusalem's holy burgh, departing from the place where they so late beheld with their ouen eyes God rise aloft, their kind Disfenser. There was unbroken weeping, their faithful love was overwhelmed with grief, their hearts were hot, their bosoms surged aithin, their thoughts were all a-gloti. His glorious thanes awaited there their Sowran Lord's behests, within that noble burgh, ten nights withal, as He Himself, the Lord of hiazen, bade, e'er He ascended in ommipotence to heazen's keeping, and white angels came. toward the bounteous Prince of warrior-men.

' He awas borne aloft embraced in angels' arms unto the spacious glory of His might, above the heauen's splendour, high and holy.'

Of that Bird's fight they might no knowledge have, who made denial of the ascinsion, and who believed not that the Source of life, in form of man, all holy from the earth, was raised aloft above the glorious hosts.

Then He who shaped the world, God's Spirit-Son, ennobled us, and granted sifts to us, eternal homes'mid angels upon high; and wisdom, too, of soul, full manifold He sowed and set within the minds of men.

'fore werrior-bands one can awake the hart, the minstrel's joy. One can interpere well the lazu divine, and one the flanets' course and wide creation. One cunningly can write the spoken word. To one He granteth skill, when in the fight the archirs swiftly scnd the storm of darts, the winged javelin, ower the shields defence. Fearlessly another can o'er the salt sfa urge the ocean-bark and stir the surging depth. One can ascend the lofty the and stgep. One can fashion well steeled stiord and wecapon. One knoweth the plains' direction, the zuide aigys. Thus the Ruler, Child divine, dispenseth unto us His gifts on earth; He will not give to any one man all the spirit's wivisdom, lest pride injure him, raised for above the rest by his sole might.

O'er all the middle-earth the mopn doth shine, a ghostly' star, e'en as the Chureh of God glisteneth bright, whene'er the True and Just are linked together; as it saith in books, thut when the Child divine, the King all pure, had risen from the earth, then the Chureh here of the faithful ones endured oppression beneath the tyranny' of heathen rule; then did the sinful take no hecd of truth, nor of their spirit's need, but brake and burned
God's temple; they hated and destroyed, and bloodshed wrought; nathless through the Spirit's grace the welfare of God's servants was maintained, after the ascension of the eternal Lord. Thereof sang Solomon, the son of David, all-wise in song and secrets spiritual, the mer of the nations, and these words spake:-

- 'It shall be known once, that the angels' King,

The first leap wias, when He came to the damsel, the spotless maid, and sinlessly took there a human form, and was anon the solace of all mankind. ; The second liap was this,the Infant's birth, when He was in the manger, the Glory of all Glories suathed in clothes, in form of child. The heavenly King's career wias the third leap, when He, the Father's Solace, ascended on the rood. Into the sepulchere was the fourthe leap, when He had left the tree and lay ziithin that cave. - The fifth leap was, when He bowed down the multitude of hell in living torment, and bound their king within, the devils' adrocate, so grim of mood, with fiery fetters, where he lieth yet, fastened in prison there with manacles, and shackled with his sins. The sixth leap was the revel of the Holy, when He rose unto His ancient home; the angelic host was blithe with sweetest laughter and with joy on that holy tide; they saw the Crozi'n of Glory, the noble Chief, approach those bright abodes, His Fatherland. That reael of the Prince brought endless joy to those blessed denizens.

Thus God's eternal Child, here upon earth, sprang boldly o'er the lofty hills, by liaps, from mount to mount; and e'en so must we men, with our hearts' inmost thoughts, by such leaps, spring from virtue unto virtue, and for slory strive, so that through holy works wie may ascend to the highest height, where there is joy and bliss and ministering legions. Great is our need to seek saliation the we with all our hearts, where earnestly in spirit we repose, so that the Saviour-Child, the living God, may with our bodies soar aloft from hence.

Wherefore we must contemn all idle lusts and atounds of sin, and cherish goodlier things; wie have our solace in the Ommipotent, our Father in heaten; He, the Holy One, will send His angels hither from on high to shield us from the noxious arrow-shafts of those that work our bane, lest gruesome fiends shonld dial us wounds, whenas the Enemj, the great Accuser, sendeth the bitter dart among the folk of God from his drainn bow.

Verily must we kecp constant watch, and must beware, against the sudden shot, lest the envenomed foint, the bitter dart, the fiends' pernicious artifice, should strike beneath the bones' enclosure; its wound is grievous, the ghastliest of gashes. May we guavd us then, whilst we hold habitution upon earth; and be we wishful for the Father's peace; pray we the Son of God, and the kindly Spirit, that He protect us from the spoilers' weapons, the wiles of foes; He gave us life and limb, body and eke soul; ever to Him be praise and glory in the heazens, world without cnd!

into the Virgin's womb, when He came first, holy from on high. Alas! my mind presagcth; I fear that then' 'will be a sterner doom, when He, the Lord of hosts, cometh again, for feebly kept I what my Saviour bade in His books. Wherefore shall I see terror and tribulation, I know full well, when many to the synod shall be led, monto the presence of the cternal Judge.

The Leenest there shall quake, when he heareth the Lord, the heaven's Ruler, utter words of wirath to those who in the world obeyed Him ill, while they might solace find most easily for their 自iarning and their 5iPed. Many afeard shall wearily await upon that flain what penalty He will adjudge to them for their deeds. The đdinsomeness of earthly gauds shall then be changed. In day's of yore $\mathbb{4}$ nknown, Lake-floods embraced the region of life's joy, and all earth's Jortune; then each precious thing shall be consumed in fire; bright and süift the ruddy flaple shall rage, and fircely stride o'er the wide world; the plains shall a'aste away; the citadels shall crash; the fire shall speed; unpityingly shall he, greediest of guests, consume the treasures which men prized of old, whilst pride abode with them upon this earth. Wherefore would I instruct each aiell-beloved, lest he be careless of his spirit's need, or pour it forth in boasting, whilst God aitlleth that he may here abide within the world, whilst soul with body', the guest-house it is in, may' joumey on together. It behoveth each, during his life-day's, to remember well, how all-benign wias the Ompipotent when He first came, e'en as the angel spake. He will be stem then, when $H_{e}$ cometh again, wrathful and rigorous. The heavens shall quail, and all the great estatis of middle-earth shall quake, when $H e$, bright んi ing, requiteth them, for that they lived on earth in wickedness, stained with transgression; wiherefore they shall long, weary of life, beset with flames, endure dire retribution in a sea of fire, when the great King in highest majesty to that tribunal cometh; then men's dismay, the cry of anguish, shall be heard aloud amid the noises of the heavens; sadly shall they bewail before the eternal Judge, aiho have but faint reliance in their works.

Then greater terror shall be manifest than ever hath been heard of upon earth, jea, from the first beginning; at that sudden time eath evil-doer will haze liefer for than all this transient creation some place where, in that onvard rush of triumph, he may conceal hiun, ai'hen the Lord of hosts, the Chief of Princes, shall adjudge to all, to friends and foes alike, to every man, a righteous recompense. Great is our need, that in this barren tinue, ere that grim dread, we should bethink us of our spirit's grace.

Now' tis most like as if we fare in ships on the ocean-flood, over the water cold, driving our wessels through the spacious seas with horses of the deep. A perilous way is this of boundless suaves, and these are stormy seas, on which we toss here in this feeble world; o'er the deep faths. Ours was a sorry plight, until at last we sailed unto the land, over the troubled main. Help came to us, that brought us to the haven of saliation,
-God's Spirit-Son, and granted grace to us, that we might know, e'en from the vessel's deck, where we must bind with anchorage secure sternly will He exact His payment then, when the blood-red rood in the ethereal sky shall brightly shine, where once the sun was wont.

Fearful and sorrowful shall they look thereon, dark sinners damned by base iniquity; the best thing in the world shall seem their bane, when they would fain regard it as their bliss. With souls a-weary shall they see withal the ancient wounds and gashes on the Lord, $e^{\prime}$ en as the base contrivers pierced with nails the hands so white and cke the holy feet, and from His side, too, let the gore pour forth, and blood and water both at once, commingled, came gushing forth before the people there, before their eyes, while $H e$ was on the rood. All this may they themselies there contemplate open and manifest, how much He bore for lowe of men, for wicked simers' sake; the sons of men may casily perceize how they, false in their thoughts, belied Hin then, mocked Him with insult, and upon His face e'en spat their spittle, spake to Him with taunt, and on His blessed countinance withal the hell-prone miscreants struck Him with their hands, with their outstretchad palms, and with their fists,

They saw how dumb creation, the earth all green, and the ethereal shy, aff righted, felt the sufferings of the Lord; howe sorely mourned they, though they were not quick. when impious men with sinful hands did seize theirvery Maker! The sun became obscured, darkened with misery' and in Jerusalem the people saze the choicest of all webs, that multitudes were wont to marvel at, the glory of the holy house of God, they sazi, it rent, so that in pieces twain it lay upon the earth; the temple's acil, with wondrous colours wrought to dick that house, was nizen asundir, as a falchion's edge, full sharp, had passed there-through. Stone walls a-many, throughout earth's tract, with headlong ruin fill; and all the earth was troubled sore with fear, and quaked with sudden shock; the spacious sem shoutd forth its mighty power, and burst its bonds, and o'er earth's bosom dashed in angry mood; yea, in their radiant homes the stars then lost their winsome beauty; at that self-same time the heaven serene discerned who erst had made it

What hope hath he who wittingly disdaineth to bear in mind his Master's sentle lore, and all the miseries He endured for men, zu'shful that we might possess on high, to all eternity, the home of bliss? Grievous inded shall be their lot, who damned by deadly sins must on that auifful day of mighty doom behold wiith souls a-zitity the gashes, ziounds, and torments of the Lord; greatest their woe to see how that the King zuith His own body ransomed them from sin, in meckness, so that they might live, devoid of their ill-deeds, and have the endless bliss of heavenly glory. They did not knou' the thanks due to their Sovran for this heritage; wherefore, to their affliction, shall they see signs unpropitions manifest in God, when Christ shall sit there on His kingly throne, on His high seat, while the Almighty Father, the radiant Creator, Lord of the hosts of heaven, prescribeth rightcously withal for eecry man according to his deeds.

of Christ Himself the cleanly multitude, chosen for their virtues; in their life-days joyfully had they performed His word. Workers of wickedness shall be disposed before their Maker on the worser side; victory's true King shall bid the throng of sinful mortals wend unto His left; discovered, shall they there bewail and quake, afourd before the Lord; as foul as goats, an unpure folk, they may not hope for grace. When the spirits' doom shall be decreed 'fore God unto all generations as they wrought, three signs shall then be plainly aisible at once "pon the blessed, for they kept well their Lord's behest, both by their words and works.
The first sign manifest shall be, to wit, that they shall shine with light before the folk, with bliss and brightness, theroughout the homes on high; their former deeds shall shine upon them there, upon each of them, e'en brighter than the sun. Likewise a second sign shall be revealed,in glory shall they know their Souran's grace, and they shall see their eyes' delight therein, that they', as saints, 'mid angels, are to ou'n should pass into the power of the fiends, that mankind's progeny should see dire pangs, and should experience a loacless home, sorry vicissitudes; then I descended as a son unto his mother, yet was her maidenhood wholly inviolate. I zuas born alone for mankind's solace; with their lands they swathed Me, wrapped Me in a poor man's weeds, laid Me in darkness, swaddled in dusky clothes. Lo! this for the world I suffered; little seemed I to the sons of men; on the hard stonc I lay, a young child in its crib, for that $I$ would renove from thee hell's torture and hot bale; that thou mightst shine as saint, blessed in the life eternal, therefore I bore that pain.

endured the suffering of their baleful strokes; oft on $M^{\prime}$ visage spittle fell from mouths of impious workers of iniquity;
they mingled, too, for Me full bitterly an unsweet drink of ainegar and gall; for mankind bore I then the arrath of foes; they followed Me with torments; reckless in hate, they struck Me with their scourges,-all that pain, their scom and cruel gibes, in humbleness I bore for thee, -and round about My head a bitter-biting crown they bent anon, fiercely they pressed it on,-'twas zerought of thorns.
Then was I hanged upon a lofty tree, and fastened to a rood; with a spear there from my side they poured out on to earth My blood and gore. That thou thereby shouldst be delivered from the deail's tyranny, all sinless suffered I this punishment, this sore affliction, till from my body the living spirit sent I forth alone.
See now the fatal wounds they made of yore upon My palms and cke upon . My fiet, by which I hung full firmly fastened there; here mayest thou see, too, manifist e'en jet, the gory wound, the gash upon My side.

How unequal was the reckoning 'twixt us two! I there received thy pain that thou in bliss mightst happily enjoy My native realm; and dearly by My death I bought for thee long life, that thou mightst thenceforth eiermore duell in the light, beauteous, zoid of sin. My body's flesh, the which had harmed no mann, lay buried in the earth, hidden deep beneath, down in its sepulchre, that thou mightst shine mighty'mid angels, in the skies above.
Wherefore didst thou forsake the beauteous life, which graciously I bought for thec, in lowe, with Mine own body, to help thee in thy plight? So witless wast thou, that thou didst not show thanks to thy Lord for thy redemption.

Nought claim I now for that sore death of Mine, so bitter, which I there endured for thee, but render Me thy life, for which, in martyrdom, I gave thee formerly . Wine own as price. I claim of thee the life thou hast so sinfully destroyed to thine own slame, with base transgression.

Why hast thou wittingly with filth defiled, through wicked lust and through foul sinfulness, the tabernacle I sanctified in thee, to be the cherished home of My delight?

Yea, thou didst shamefully pollute with guilt that botly which I ransomed for Myself from the grasp of foes, and then forbade it sin.
Why hast thou hanged Me worse on thy hands' cross than when of old I hung? Methinks this harder; thy sins' cross is now heazier for Me , on which I am bound fast, unwillingly, than was that other which I erst ascended, with Mine own will, whenas thy misery

'He shall sweep the victor-sword with His risht hand, that the devils shall fall down the deep abyss into swart flame; the bands of sinful ones into earth's realm beneath; the fated spirits into the camp of foes; the guilty shoal, damned to perdition, into the prison-house, the devil's death-hall. Ve'er shall they seek again remembrance of the Lord, nor'scape their sins, but, crime-stained, they shall there, bewrapt with flame endure destruction; vengeance for their sins shall they see recealed; that is cternal death; through all the litelong night the fiery gulf may ne'er avail to purge their sins autay' from that hell-race, the stain from off their soul. But the deep pit feadeth still the weary ones; bottomless it keepeth the spirits in its gloom; with its old flame it burneth them; and with terrors chill, with hateful serpents, and with torments many, with sharp and deadly jaws, it scatheth folk.
Wherefore we may belicve and aye declare, soothly affirm, that that soul's guardian hath wholly lost the wisdom of this life, who hedeth not now awhether his spirit shall be

II. HOMILIA IN ASCENSIONE DOMINI. (Cp.passus secundus.)

Albre vestes lætitiæ indicia,
(§ 9.) Hoc autem nobis primum quærendum est, quidnam fit quod nato Domino apparuerunt Angeli, et tamen non leguntur in albis vestibus apparuisse: ascendente autem Domino missi Angeli in albis leguntur vestibus apparuisse. Sic etenim scriptum Act.i. 9. est: Videntibus illis clevatus est, et nubes suscepit eum ab oculis corum. Cumque intuerentur in cerlum euntem illum, ecce duo viri steterunt juxta illos in vestibus albis. In albis autem vestibus gaudium et solemnitas mentis ostenditur. Quid est ergo quod nato Domino, non in albis vestibus; ascendente autem Domino, in albis vestibus Angeli apparent: nisi quod tunc magna solemnitas Angelis facta est, cum cœelum Deus homo penetravit? Quia nascente Domino videbatur divinitas humiliata: ascendente vero Domino, est humanitas exaltata. Albæ etenim vestes exaltationi magis congruunt quam humiliationi. In assumtione ergo ejus Angeli in albis vestibus videri debuerunt: quia qui in nativitate sua apparuit Deus humilis, in Ascensione sua ostensus est homo sublimis.

Ex Ascensione Christi quid proficiamus.

Genes. iii. 19.

Job sxviii. 7.
(§ ro.) Sed hoc nobis magnopere, fratres carissimi, in hac solemnitate pensandum est: quia deletum est hodierna die chirographum damnationis nostræ, mutata est sententia corruptionis nostre. Illa enim natura cui dictum est: Terra es, et in terram ibis, hodie in coelum ivit. Pro hac ipsa namque carnis nostre sublevatione per figuram beatus Job Dominum avem vocat. Quia enim Ascensionis ejus mysterium Judæam non intelligere conspexit, de infidelitate ejus sententiam protulit, dicens: Semitam ignoravit avis. Avis enim recte appelatus est 148

Dominus; quia corpus carneum ad æthera libravit. Cujus avis semitam ignoravit quisquis eum ad cœlum ascendisse non credidit. De hac solemnitate per Psalmistam dicitur : Elevata Psal. viii. 2. est magnificentia tua super calos. De hac rursus ait: Ascendit Psal. xlvi. 6. Deus in jubilatione, et Dominus in voce tubce. De hac iterum dicit: Ascendens in altum, captivan duxit captivitatem, dedit dona Psal. 1xvii. 19. hominibus. Ascendens quippe in altum, captivam duxit captivitatem : quia corruptionem nostram virtute suæ incorruptionis absorbuit. Dedit vero dona hominibus; quia misso desuper Spiritu, alii sermonem sapientiæ, alii sermonem scientiæ, alii 1 Cor. xii. 8. gratiam virtutum, alii gratiam curationum, alii genera linguarum, alii interpretationem tribuit sermonum. Dedit ergo dona hominibus. De hac Ascensionis ejus gloria etiam Habacuc ait: Elevatus est sol, luna stetit in ordine suo. Quis enim solis nomine Habac. iii. ir. nisi Dominus, et quæ lunæ nomine nisi ecclesia designatur? Quousque enim Dominus ascendit ad cælos, sancta ejus Ecclesia adversa mundi omnimodo formidavit: at postquam ejus Ascensione roborata est, aperte predicavit, quod occulte credidit. Elevatus est ergo sol, et luna stetit in ordine suo : quia cum Dominus cœelum petiit, sancta ejus Ecclesia in auctoritate prædicationis excrevit. Hinc ejusdem Ecclesiæ voce per Salomonem dicitur : Ecce iste venit saliens in montibus, et tran-Cant. ii. 8. siliens colles. Consideravit namque tantorum operum culmina, et ait : Ecce iste venit saliens in montibus. Veniendo quippe ad redemtionem nostram, quosdam, ut ita dixerim, saltus dedit. Vultis, fratres carissimi, ipsos ejus saltus agnoscere? De cœlo venit in uterum, de utero venit in præsepe, de præsepe venit in crucem, de cruce venit in sepulcrum, de sepulcro rediit in ccelum. Ecce ut nos post se currere faceret, quosdam pro nobis

Psal. xviii. 6.

Cant. i. 3.
Dominum ascendentem in celum sequi festinemus.
saltus manifestata per carnem veritas dedit: quia cxultavit ut gigas ad currcndam wiam suam, ut nos ei diceremus ex corde: Trahe nos post te, curremus in odorem unguentorum tuorum.
(§ in.) Unde, fratres carissimi, oportet ut illuc sequamur corde, ubi eum corpore ascendisse credimus. Desideria terrena fugiamus, nihil nos jam delectet in infimis, qui patrem habemus in cœlis. Et hoc nobis est magnopere perpendendum : quia is qui placidus ascendit, terribilis redibit : et quidquid nobis cum mansuetudine precepit, hoc a nobis cum districtione exiget. Nemo ergo indulta pœenitentiæ tempora parvipendat: nemo curam sui, dum valet, agere negligat : quia Redemtor noster tanto tunc in judicium districtior veniet, quanto nobis ante judicium magnam patientiam prærogavit. Hæc itaque vobiscum, fratres, agite : hæc in mente sedula cogitatione versate. Quamvis adhuc rerum perturbationibus animus fluctuet: jam tamen spei vestræ anchoram in æternam patriam figite, intentionem mentis in vera luce solidate. Ecce ad colum ascendisse Dominum audivimus. Hoc ergo servemus in meditatione, quod credimus. Et si adhuc hic tenemur infirmitate corporis, sequamur tamen eum passibus amoris. Non autem deserit desiderium nostrum ipse qui dedit, Jesus Christus Dominus noster, qui vivit et regnat cum Deo Patre in unitate Spiritus Sancti Deus, per omnia secula seculorum. Amen.

III. HYMNUS DE DIE IUDICII.

> (Cf. Passus Tertius.)

Apparebit repentina dies magna domini, Fur obscura velut nocte improvisos occupans.

Brevis totus tum parebit prisci luxus saeculi, Totum simul cum clarebit praeterisse saeculum.

Clangor tubae per quaternas terrae plagas concinens, Vivos una mortuosque Christo ciet obviam.

De coelesti iudex arce, maiestate fulgidus Claris angelorum choris comitatus aderit :

Erubescet orbis lunae, sol et obscurabitur, Stellae cadent pallescentes, mundi tremet ambitus

Flamma, ignis anteibit iusti vultum iudicis, Coelos, terras et profundi fluctus ponti decorans.

Gloriosus in sublimi rex sedebit solio, Angelorum tremebunda circumstabunt agmina.

Huius omnes ad electi colligentur dexteram, Pravi pavent a sinistris hoedi velut foetidi :

Ite, dixit rex ad dextros, regnum coeli sumite, Pater vobis quod paravit ante omne saeculum ;

Karitate qui fraterna me iuvistis pauperem, Karitatis nunc mercedem reportate divites.

Laeti dicent : quando, Christe, pauperem te vidimus, Te, rex magne, vel egentem miserati iuvimus:

Magnus illis dicet iudex: cum iuvistis pauperes, Panem, domum, vestem dantes, me iuvistis humiles.

Nec tardabit et sinistris loqui iustus arbiter:
In gehennae maledicti flammas hinc discedite ;

Obsecrantem me audire despexistis mendicum, Nudo vestem non dedistis, neglexistis languidum.

Peccatores dicent: Christe, quando te vel pauperem, Te, rex magne, vel infirmum contemnentes sprevimus.

Quibus contra iudex altus: mendicanti quamdiu Opem ferre despexistis, me sprevistis improbi.

Retro ruent tum iniusti ignes in perpetuos, Vermis quorum non morietur, flamma nec restinguitur, Satan atro cum ministris quo tenetur carcere, Fletus ubi mugitusque, strident omnes dentibus.

Tunc fideles ad coelestem sustollentur patriam, Choros inter angelorum regni petent gaudia, Urbis summae Hirusalem introibunt gloriam Vera lucis atque pacis in qua fulget visio.

XPm. regem iam paterna claritate splendidum Ubi celsa beatorum contemplantur agmina-

Ydri fraudes ergo cave, infirmentes subleva, Aurum temne, fuge luxus si vis astra petere.

Zona clara castitatis lumbos nunc praecingere, In occursum magni regis fer ardentes lampades.

IV. HOMILIA IN DIE EPIPHANIÆ.

(Cf. 11. 1126-1190.)
(§ 2.) Omnia quippe elementa auctorem suum venisse testata sunt. Ut enim de eis quiddam usu humano loquar : Deum hunc cæli esse cognoverunt, quia sub plantis ejus se calcabile præbuit. Terra cognovit, quia eo moriente contremuit. Sol cognovit, quia lucis suæ radios abscondit. Saxa et parietes cognoverunt, quia tempore mortis ejus scissa sunt. Infernus agnovit, quia hos quos tenebat mortuos, reddidit. Et tamen hunc, quem Dominum omnia insensiblia elementa senserunt, adhuc infidelium Judæorum corda Deum esse minime cognoscunt, et duriora saxis, scindi, ad pœenitendum nolunt : eumque confiteri abnegant, quem elementa, ut diximus, aut signis aut scissionibus Deum clama-bant.-(In Evang. Lib. I. Homilia x.)

CRITICAL NOTES

CRITICALNOTES.

PARTI.

1. It must be borne in mind that the 'Christ' is a fragment ; the beginning of the poem is lost; of the missing part a single word still remains, viz., cyninge (i.e. 'to the king'); this is the first word in the Exeter MS. ; I have purposely omitted it, so as to give the appearance of completeness to the poem, but there is no authority for the capital letters. The first words of the MS. run as follows :-
cyninge - Diu eart se weall stan, etc.
1-4. cf. Matthew xxi. 42 ; Ephes. ii. 20-2 2 ; iv. 15 , etc.
2. heafod, MS. heafor.
3. $b[y r i] g$, the $g$ is just visible in the MS.; after $b$ there is what I take to be the upper part of a curved $y$ still traceable, resembling in shape an $o$ (certainly not $u$ ); the letters $r i$ are conjectural.
eagna, originally $-n a n$; the erased $n$ is still visible.
4. forlet, MS. forlȩt.
5. craftga, MS. crastya.

12-14. cp. Amos ix. 11 ; Acts xv. 16.
1 3. hra can hardly be read, owing to the action of some liquid, which has almost obliterated a number of words on this and the next page of the MS.
15. cp. Luke i. 71.
17. pu reccend, MS. pa.
19. eadgu, after ga, which comes at the end of the line in the MS., a small piece of parchment has been cut out ; one letter at most could have been written on it; I am inclined to think that cadga is what the poet wrote ; Grein reads-

cadgraठ us siges, o\rum formyrneठ, avitigan wilsiǒes . . .'

20. wilstjes, the last two letters can scarcely be read, the whole word is barely visible.
21. [ $N u$ gemarsi]giaì, five or six letters are obliterated before -giax; the reading in the text is purely conjectural; Gr. suggests [modgeomre halsi]gias, but the space in the MS. renders the reading impossible.
22. hete . . . ceose, two or three letters are obliterated before ceose; the first of the missing letters was probably $h$, judging by the alliterative requirements of the line ; her (i.e. 'here,' or 'now') should, perhaps, be supplied. Gr., ignoring the fact that the want of an alliterative word in the second half of the line is due to the obliteration of letters before ceose, suggested héose for ceose, formulating an A.S. hiosan, 'festinare'; later (Germania, i865), he withdrew this suggestion in favour of [heo]fe (i.e. 'with lamentation').

I cannot detect, as Schipper seems to have been able to do in 1870, ( $v$. Germania, 1874,) any trace of the reading to hofe before ceose ; he adds, 'das MS. ist hier jedoch schwer leserlich.'
25. reil-six, l-s almost obliterated in MS. but is quite legible; Grein's suggestion wyrnde, (Germania, 1865,) is therefore untenable; it would be best, perhaps, to take hroonne as directly dependent on sorgende, ' yearning for the time when.'
29. pe he to zululdre forlet, ' whom he hath admitted to glory.'
30. ze, MS. pe. 32. se pe, hardly legible in MS.
41. geond-spreot, so MS. ; Gr. geondspreat.
46. ryne gemiclax, lit. 'enlargeth the course,' i.e. 'hasteneth the progress.' 48. ho [r]sche, MS. hoscne.
68. geneð̀de, so MS. ; Gr. genedde (i.e. pp. of genédan); but the MS. reading is obviously correct; geneさ̀an = 'to venture,' 'to strive.' Thorpe was similarly troubled by the line, and suggested that a leaf was wanting after nearo.
69. $h u$, so MS. ; Gr. nu.
76. mod, so MS. ; Gr. emends to môt; but mod was often used 158 in A.S. with special reference to human passions and desires, and might well be rendered by 'desire' in this passage.
90. solima, MS. solim̧.
92. mund minne, so MS.; Th. inne.
$m u n d$; cp . Icel. mundr, 'the money paid by the bridegroom to the father of the bride,' also 'the bridegroom's gift to the bride'; this is seemingly the only recorded instance of the word in A.S. literature, here evidently used metaphorically. It must be carefully distinguished from mund, 'hand,' 'protection,' which is feminine, though ultimately the words may be connected.

103. earendel, it is difficult to translate the word adequately; some bright star is evidently meant, probably the same as Orvandels-thi, 'Orwendel's toe,' mentioned in the Edda. Thor carried Orwendel from Jotunheim in a basket on his back; Orwendel's toe stuck out of the basket, and got frozen; Thor broke it off, and flung it at the sky, and made a star of it, which is called Örvandels-tí; (v. Grimm's Deutsche Myth). That the story of Orwendel was Christianised in medireval times is attested by the German story of Orendel in the Heldenbuch, where the hero wins 'the seamless coat' of his master. 'Earendel' does not occur elsewhere in A. S. poetry as a poetical designation of Christ; the word is interpreted in the Epinal glossary by 'jubar.'

The spelling in the Erfurt Gloss 'oerendil' is noteworthy. It seems probable that 'Earendel'=Orion,' the constellation brightest at winter-time, and Örvandels-ta' $=$ 'Rigel,' the chief star of the constellation.

Cp. the opening lines of Paradise Lost, Book iii. :-
'Hail, holy light, offspring of Heaven first-born ! Or of the Eternal co-cternal beam,' etc.
Cf. John i. 4, 9.
107. inlihtes, so MS. ; Gr. inlihtest.
112. byldo, corrected in MS. from hyldo.
117. sceadu, corrected in MS. from sceai) $u$.
118. cf. John i. 1.5, 14.
127. bi getwyrhtum, 'accordingly to his deeds,' i.e. 'deservedly.'
132. eft, MS. est.
142. Read 'patte sunu meotudes sylfa wolde.'
152. anum . . . ofer-pearfum, about five letters obliterated; Gr. anum oferpearfum, ignoring the missing word.
153. Haftas hyge-geomre hider [gesece Ne lat] ]e behindan ponne pu heonan cyrre. About ten letters are obliterated after hider; the bracketed words are purely conjectural ; Gr. 'hider [gesohtest]: [ne] pe behindan nu lat'; this is obviously untenable, and was, no doubt, due to Thorpe's erroneous reading of the MS., 'hider . . . pe behindan . . . es nu liet.'
161. heannissum, so MS.; Gr. heahnissum.
162. ferh, so MS.; Gr. fers.
168. worde, so MS.; probably a scribal error for worda, dependent on worn, unless the word must be construed with 'habbe gehyred,' 'I have heard in word,' i.e. 'I have heard spoken.'
187. gehzeyrfed, so MS. ; Gr. gezeyrped.
188. nat-hzeylces, so MS. ; Gr. nat-hzeylces [searo] ; purls natkwylces may, perhaps, be explained as a confusion of two con-structions;-purh nat-haylcne (the accusative after purh), and nat haylces, (the gen. after nát; cp. nat he para goda, Beow. 682.)
189. sprece, so MS.; Gr. sprece.
201. heag-engel, so MS. ; Gr. heah-engel.
205. tir-fruma[n], MS. tir-fruma.
209. sunu, so MS. ; Gr. suna.
228. zeeoroda, so MS. ; Gr. zecrodir.
229. forp a, so MS.; Th. forpī (i.e. forpam) ; Gr. furpum.
238. Cp. Prov. viii. 22-31.
243. miltse, MS. milstse.
246. maegon, so MS. ; Gr. magon.
256. eozed $d, d$ corrected from $\delta$ in MS.
27. mera. Th. suggested that the word was due to an error of the scribe, and should properly be maria; there is no evidence for this view, but it is probable that the poet used mara because of its likeness to maria, - the sort of popular etymology that the old homilists delighted in.
276. para [p]e gezuurde, MS. para ege zourde; a letter erased before ege.

2So. selesten, so MS. ; Gr. selestan.
284. wor[[djczndra, MS. worlcundra.
299. sehealden, this form is either the infinitive (=gehealdan), 'and thou shalt hold thyself immaculate,' dependent on pu sceolde, or it may, perhaps, be better construed as a past part., dependent on fu sceolde (zeesan) : cp. scial sezerixted (zesan), l. 1259 ; in this case $\rho e$ must be rendered as an accusative of regard, 'as for thee, Mary, thou shalt be held immaculate for aye.'
302. Esaias, an error for Ezekiel: cp. Ezek. xliv. 1-3.
309. Wende suide pat aug elda afre miahte; one would expect ne before meahte, i.e. 'he ielt sure that mortal might not,' etc. ; the emendation may be unnecessary, if wende $\mathbf{j} a t=$ atende hu pat, zeende having almost the force of wundrade.
312. in-hebba, MS. in hebba; Gr. inhebban; the prefix evidently has the force of O. H. G. int, ent, 'to heave up' (O. H. G. intheffen) ; cp. in-lindan, 'to unbind,' e.g. an sceal in-bindan forstes fetre, 'one shall unbind the fetters of frost,' Gnomic Verses (Exeter Bk.), 75 ; both forms are hapaxlegomena.
321. stondod, so MS. ; Gr. stondad.
333. liopu-argan, lit. 'a limb-key:'
338. motan, MS. motam.
360. nied, MS. med.
370. we, MS. pe.
395. wear[dia]d, MS. wears.

39S. fihte, so MS. ; Gr. flyhte.
409. heannessum, so MS. ; Gr. heahnessum.
418. wiht, MS. $n i h t(=w i h t=w i h t)$.
422. prim. so MS.; Gr. prym.
PARTII.

The poet has made very free use of Gregory's 29th Homily, sects. $9-1 \mathrm{r}$, in the second part of his poem. For convenience of reference, the text is printed in the appendix. Cynewulf's true poetical talent loses nothing by comparison with his original.
445. mund-hcals, a hapaxlegomenon; (?) = mund-héals, (cp. heals-boc), 'salus tutelx,' i.e. 'the safcty which comes from the protection (mund) afforded by another'; but cp. mund, 1. 92, and the special use of heals in such compounds as heals-maged, Gen. 2155 ; heals-yebedda, Beow. 63; mund-heals may have had a similar meaning, 'beloved maiden.'
455. berega, so MS. ; Gr. brego.
493. cuecmun, so MS. ; Gr. cuomon.
495. zeerdedun, MS. zevardedum.
502. heredun, MS. heredum.
515. stíll, so MS. ; Gr. stot.
$516-5 \mathrm{IS}$. I take these lines to be the reply of Gatileans; another interesting instance of the dramatic bent of Cynewulf's genius. Grein takes ll. 509.525 as one long specch. The MS. is in favour of my view of the passage, as a new section begins with $1 .{ }_{5} 16$.

5 18. gedryt, so MS. ; Gr. gedryht.
526. bifengun, a scribal error for bifangen, due probably to the Northern bifen of the archetype (cp. I. 1156 ).
536. wopes heving, 'a ring of weeping.' This phrasc occurs four times in A. S. poetry, an instance occurring in each of the four poems, Elene, Guthlac, Andreas, and Christ ; its peculiar force is somewhat doubtful ; Grimm explains it as fletus intensissimus quasi circulatim erumpens; Grein connects hring with hringan, 'sonare'; I render the phrase by 'unbroken weeping,' taking 'hring' in its literal sense of ' ring,' the symbol of continuity.
538. hreder, MS. hreder.
539. beorn, MS. born; bidon, MS. bidin.
547. al-beorhte, MS al-beorhte.
557. bireafod, so MS. ; Gr. bereafod.
558. hi, fem. sing. referring to helle (f.).
559. orlege, lit. 'war, strife, hostility,' also 'a place where hostility is shown,' as in this passage ; cp. 'Czecadon おat hé on Jam beorge byrnan sceolde . . . gif hi monna dream of Jam orlege eft ne wolde sylfa gesecan, Guth. 167 ; also Guth. 426; 'orlege' in both passages $=$ the place which Guthlac had selected for his dwelling, wresting it from the evil spirits.
563. ne meahtan, MS. ne,ahtan.
585. gehyrdan, so MS. ; Gr. gehyrdon.
589. zumat, so MS. ; Gr. zumap.

589-596. Note the rhyme and assonance. used to give special point to the passage.

614. [h]is, MS. is.
618. [zucs], evidently omitted by the scribe after sungen.
634. suntu, so MS.; Gr. suna.
653. fyht, MS. fyt.

658-664. This digression on 'the arts and crafts' is a free paraphrase of the lines in Gregory's Homily, (see Appendix II.,) 'dedit vero dona hominibus; quia misso desuper Spiritu, alii sermonem sapientiæ, alii sermonem scientiæ, alii gratiam virtutum, alii gratiam curationum, alii genera linguarum, alii interpretationem tribuit sermonum. Dedit ergo dona hominibus.' In comparing the Anglo-Saxon and Latin two points are noteworthy ; in the first place, the amplification of the theme, so as to include secular as well as spiritual gifts; in the second place, the addition of God's motive in not giving all His gifts to any one man; this is not in the original. It is clear that the poet, when he came to the passage in Gregory's Homily, was reminded of a poem, written, in all probability by himself, at an earlier period, preserved in the Exeter MS. and known as 'Manna Creftas.' A comparison of the lines under discussion and the poem brings out a large number of parallelisms of expression. I am inclined to think that Gregory's Commentary' on Job, xxxviii. 4-5, was the original of the poem. Here we have the motive, which is not in the Homily. At the same time I should not be surprised to find a passage in Gregory's works even nearer to the Anglo-Saxon. The original of $11.682-4$ should be words to this effect :-
' Non enim uni dantur omnia, ne in superbiam elatus cadat.'
(Cp. Gregory, Lib. 1, Homilia x. sect. 32, on Ezekiel iii. 13, with marginal note, ' cur divisiones gratiarum sint.')
672. sumum, MS. sumia.
677. heanne, so MS.; Gr. heahne.
683. him, MS. hiz; Th. Gr. 'Ms. hi.'
697. Tixel, MS. /ixad.
708. fiodan, between $o$ and $d$ a letter erased in MS.
709. blad, MS. blum.

71 I . dauipes, so MS. ; Gr. dauides.
718. ealle, so MS. ; Th. Gr. 'M1S. eall.'
723. gobyrdu, so MS., either the nom. plural, or a scribal error for selyrdu.
730. hell-warcna; MS. hell-üerena; cp. Juliana, 322, hellzerarena cyning.
739. gesazean, so MS. ; Gr. gesazoon.
742. cadgum, so MS. ; Th. Gr. 'MS. eadgu.'
756. selliran, MS. sellan.
761. cglum, MS. enghum.
765. fior-scyte, MS. far,scyte.
776. si, MS. s.
783. hleotan, h added by a later hand.
789. Dy repran, MS. dyrepran; Th. emended to Dy repran.
795. leded, MS. ledaot. So3. scacen, so MS.

799-8o6. v. 'Excursus on the Runes.'
8o5. bilocen, so MS., (misprinted bilocan, Gr.)
So7. blac rasettio, MS. blacra settes; Kemble, blac resettex; Ettm. blic rascitox; Gr. blac rasetteo; cp. pat fyr meahue riad rasettan, Boethius, Metre 9, (quoted by Grein with wrong reference, 11,14 ;) in this latter passage, too, the editors read readra settan; Gr. rightly corrects to read rasettan.
808. recen rada, Th. recen-reada, 'the smoke red'; Gr. recen reada; kig, so MS.; Th. Gr. lig.

8io. on tyhte; Th. ontyhte, 'kindled.'
812. glesta, 'of guests,' so Th. ; Gr. géésta, 'of spirits.'
819. gast-hofe, so MS. ; Gr. gast-hofe.
820. on, so MS. ; Gr. in.
826. beheofurs, so MS.; Gr. beofiars; cp. Heora madenu ne synt behoofode, 'virgines eorum ne sunt lamentate,' (Lambeth Psalter, 77, 63).
829. baXc, MS. bade.
832. mesta, so MS.; Th. Gr. meste.
834. cuianiendra, MS. cadanindra. cerge, so MS.; Ettm. Gr. ciarge.
841. leofra, so MS.; Gr. leofre; the change to the neuter is, perhaps, unnecessary, as the word probably anticipated a masculine noun, par $=$ sum stede hzear. eall, so MS., Gr. eal.

S65. heahtu, so MS.; Th. heahiü; Gr. heahdum.

PART III.

The source of the third part of the poem is, undoubtedly, the hymn ' De die Judicii,' (see Appendix 111.,) as shown by Professor A. S. Cook, (Modern Language Notes, June 1889.) Special interest attaches to this hymn. It is certainly as old as the seventh century, for Bede refers to it in his work, De Metris. Daniel says of it: 'Juvat carmen fere totum e Scripturâ sacrâ depromptum comparare cum celebratissimo illo extremi judicii preconio, Dies ira, dies illa, quo majestate et terroribus, non sanctâ simplicitate et fide, superatur.'
873. genaget, 'assaulteth'; genagan, with accus. of person, and gen. or instr. of thing; cp. 'ace pec niola genagax, Guth. 26r,

874-876. These lines do not paraphrase any words of the Latin hymn; they were, perhaps, vaguely suggested by the second couplet, 'brevis totus . . . seculum.'
884. ealle, MS. healle.
894. onhalo gelac, 'the hidden hosts'; Gr. renders onhále $=$ 'entire'; no other instance occurs of 'onhale' in the sense of 'whole'; the usual frequent usage is 'secret,' 'hidden'; cp. wid is pes wésten, turaesstlu fela, eardas onhale earmra gesta, Guth. 268. Th. renders, 'an unsound assemblage'; Toller, 'the entire hosts.'
907. gebleod, cp. Da ayrta griowon mid menigfaldum blostmus mislice gebleode, 'the plants grew diversely coloured with manifold blossoms,' (the Anglo-Saxon version of the Hexameron of St. Basil, ed. Norman, $10,36$. )
920. Jut mag wites to wearnunga (sc. wesan), 'that may be for the soul's warning.'
923. Jonne, so MS., not pon as Th.
926. gehwonc, MS. gehzore.

933-937; the poet has missed the point of the original :'erubescet orbis lune sol et obscurabitur.'
959. untzveo, so Gr.; MS. untro, an obvious scribal error, due, perhaps, to the rare use of untweo; no other instance of the word is recorded, but cp. "untzeofeald, 'untariofealde tríoza,' (Beethius, Metre, in, 95.)
adames, the first and second $a$ in this word, as written in the MS., resemble the rounded Celtic $a$, and are different from the ordinary letter employed by the scribe.
960. gesargad, MS. gesargax ; cp. gesargad, 1. 969, where d was originally $\gamma$, the erased stroke is still visible.
977. ja, MS. pu.
978. scehdun, so MS., probably = scédun, past tense of sciadan, 'to separate '; Gr. suggests scéndun, 'von einem scíman, verwandt mit ahd. scínón, parcere? oder für sceldun $=$ scildun schirmten?'
985. sundes getwafle, 'bereft of swimming-craft'; Th., Gr., Toller, render sund, 'ocean,' 'cut off from the ocean.' I think the abstract use of the word in the sense of 'natatio' is preferable here ; cp. 'he je' at sunde oferfiat,' Beow. 517 .
1025. adames, cp. l. 959.
1041. liffruma, MS. liffruman.
1046. wera, so MS.; Th. Gr. read weras, making it subj. of magon; the change seems unnecessary, if bemipan is construed intransitively.
1078. motun, MS. motum.
1087. MS. bydyrned.
1089. The line is evidently defective; Gr. suggests [gotiod] aveorped.
1091. wita ne cujun, 'they did not know'; wita $=$ ruitan; cupun used as auxiliary; Gr. construes aita as gen. plur. of wite, 'punishment'; cp. l. 1212, zeita ne cupon, which Gr. treats simitarly ; the omission of the infinitive $n$ in the phrase is, probably, due to the northern archetype.
1093. man-forveyrhtu, so MS. Th. forayrhtī (i.e. um). 166
1099. genomian, so MS. ; Gr. gemonian.
r10.4. Lit. 'They shall see as their bane that which came to them best.'

1318. dxolian, 'to endure.' I can see nothing against this straightforward way of rendering the word; Grein's view that it is O. H. G. adaljan, M. H. G. edelen, nobilitare, is untenable: the sense of the whole passage has, 1 think, escaped both Th . and Gr. The rendering of the former is quite meaningless. There is, as yet, no evidence as to whether the word was of pagan or Christian origin ; probably the former, being perhaps the Saxon equivalent of the Scandinavian ódainsakr.

THE CYNEWULF RUNES.

CHRIST, 796-806.
The Runes in this passage stand for the letters Cynwulf, and together form the name of the author. A similar artifice is found in three other poems-'Elene,' 'Juliana,' and 'The Fates of the Apostles.' 'Christ' and 'Juliana' are both in the Exeter Codex ; 'Elene' and 'The Fates of the Apostles' in the Vercelli Codex; the latter poem consists of little more than 100 lines; it is certainly no very meritorious piece of work, and it seems strange that the poet should have been so anxious to attest his authorship thereof by a long Runic passage. In the MS. the poem immediately follows the 'Legend of Andreas,' and I am more and more inclined to regard it as a mere epilogue to this more ambitious epic, standing in exactly the same relationship therefore to it that the tenth passus of 'Elene' does to the whole poem. Its relationship is, perhaps, even closer, for, whereas the ninth passus of 'Elene' ends with 'finit,' there is no such indication of the ending of the poem in the case of 'Andreas.' At the present moment I can see nothing that militates against this view of the Cynewulfian authorship of this latter poem, and further investigation will enable us, I think, to claim that Cynewulf inserted his name in his four most important works-the epics on 'Christ,' 'Elene,' 'Juliana,' and 'Andreas.' The discovery of the runic passage at the end of 'The Fates of the Apostles' was made by Professor Napier some three years ago, and a transcript of the half-obliterated text was published by him in the Zeitschrift für deutsches Alterthum, vol. xxxin. The four runic passages may be divided into two divisions; the first, in which the Runes stand merely for the letters of the poet's name; the second, in which the Runes discharge a two-fold function, representing not merely the letters of the poet's name, but also the words that the letters suggest, the names of the letters or homonyms. To the first class belongs the passage in 'Juliana'; to the second, the other three passages. The interpretation of the Runes in these latter passages is one of difficulty ; in the first place, the lines in which they occur are by their very nature intended to puzzle the reader or the hearer, being almost riddles; in the second, several of the Runes bore different names at different periods, and we have not as much information on the subject as we need. Our chief sources of knowledge are the Runic alphabets, which, in many cases, have the names of the letters assigned throughout, and in some cases an interpretation of these names, and the 'Rune Poem,' printed by Hickes from a MS. now lost; in this poem each Rune is followed by its name, together with a short poetical interpretation of its meaning. The explanation of a Rune in any one of these passages should, I think, hold good when applied to the corresponding Rune in the other passages. For convenience of reference I print the four passages, substituting Roman letters for the Runes, and numbering each line.

10. $C$-Rune ; the name of the rune in all the Runic alphabets is cén, i.e. 'a torch,' literally 'a pine'; the word is rare in A. S. ; its sole use seems to have been as the runic-name; no other instance is recorded. In passage $\mathrm{A}, \mathrm{B}, \mathrm{C}$, the poet is evidently using the rune to suggest to his hearers the adjective cén(e), i.e. 'keen,' 'bold,' 'active.' In passage B the temptation is strong to regard $C$-drusende as equivalent to 'a drooping torch,' but in order to obtain this meaning, it is necessary to emend the MS., changing sacc, 'discontent,' into secg, 'man'; moreover drusian is specially used in the sense of 'to become inactive' (by reason of old age); cp. Phœnix, 368, he drusende deap ne bisorgax. Cene drusende, i.e. 'the ageing warrior,' is, to my mind, the subject of the whole passage, and is added as explanatory of the words áres sacc od Diat. I much doubt whether the words conveyed any other meaning to Cynewulf's hearers. I differ, too, from previous commentators in constructing peah in direct connection with the first half-line, regarding cnyssed . . . drusende as a parenthesis.

[^6]${ }^{3} \mathrm{~N} \cdot \operatorname{lige} \mathrm{C}$, Sievers' suggestion.

The $C$-Rune in passage $C$ is, as will be seen below, capable of similar interpretation.
2. $Y$ Rune. Its name in the A.S. alphabets is $\dot{y} \boldsymbol{r}$; in the 'Rune Poem' $\dot{y}$ is described in words that lead one to render it as 'a bow':
> - yr bib apelinga and eorla gehwxs nyn and wyrbmynd, byb on wicge fager, festlic on ferelde fyrdgeatewa sum.'

Yet, in spite of the Rune poem, $j$ c cannot have meant ' $a$ bow' in A. S. ; $y^{\prime} r$ is the old Norse equivalent of the A. S. cow, 'yew,' which latter word is actually the name of another rune in the Kune-Poem; it is therefore a fair inference that the interpretation of the $Y$-Rune as a 'bow' in this one place is due to Scandinavian influence on the writer of the passage in question, seeing also that in the Scandinavian Runic alphabet the letter bears the same name ir, constantly glossed 'arcus'; probably the whole idea of the Rune-Poem was suggested by similar Scandinavian poems, and the writer did not recognise that the Norse $\dot{y} r$, in the sense of 'bow,' was identical with the A.S. éow. 'yew-tree'; as a modern poet has it :-

> ' Dark down the windy vale 1 srow, The father of the fateful Bow.'2

In my opinion, no ordinary Anglo-Saxon would have been able to give any meaning at all to $j^{\prime} r$ as the name of the $Y$ rone, and if told by a scholar that it meant 'a bow,' he would have failed to see any reason for the name; the shape of the rune in A. S. Fif certainly does not suggest 'a bow,' though the name applies excellently to the Scandinavian $\nrightarrow$. The $Y$-Rune must have been a fairly late crcation in A.S., and its symbol is rightly nothing but a modification of the $U$-Rune, $n$; similarly the name of the rune, i.e. $y$ r, is, I take it, merely due to the umlauted form of the name of the $U$-Rune, i.e. air ; the rune and its name probably passed from England to Scandinavia, and there it was naturally interpreted to mean fr: 'a bow.'

How then is the rune to be interpreted, as used by Cynewulf?

[^7]In passage A, it seemingly might stand for $y$ rmơ , 'misery'; and this view has been held by most scholars-Thorpe, Kemble, Grein ; several points might be urged against the interpretation, and however plausible the suggestion seems, it is, I now think, quite untenable. Apart from other tests, the interpretation will not hold good for passage B. Grimm, Grein, Zupitza, etc., construe the rune in this latter passage as 'bow'; Leo suggests that it is equivalent to the $\Lambda$. S. rune $\dot{c} a$, and $=c i r r$, i.e. 'earth,' 'the grave,' here $=$ 'verfall der kräfte '; Reiger would substitute the rune $\alpha$, and read $\alpha{ }_{\mathrm{o}}^{\mathrm{i}} \mathrm{il}(=\mathrm{A}$. S. $\omega \bar{c} l)$; similarly in passage $\Lambda$ he would substitute Northumbrian adil $=$ A. S. vadl, 'mendicitas.'

In passage C , the words represented by the $C$-Rune and $Y$-Rune, which are co-ordinated, must evidently be the same part of speech; if $C=$ iene, 'the bold warrior,' in the same sense as in the other passages, one would expect $Y$ to stand for an adjective or substantive, in any case of masculine gender; but in passage $A$ the $Y$-Rune is co-ordinated with the $N$-Rune; concerning the meaning of this latter rune there is no doubt; it represents the abstract noun ny'd, 'necessity'; therefore the $Y$-Rune in this latter passage must, I think, stand for some similar abstract noun. Judging by $\Lambda$ and C , the $Y$-Rune represents a $y$-word that can discharge the two-fold functions of a masculine adjective (or noun) and of an abstract noun. The only AngloSaxon word that satisfies these requirements is $y f c l=(\mathrm{r})$ wretched; (2) affliction ; and there is, I venture to think, strong reasons for favouring this interpretation of the $Y$-Rune in the three passages. In passage $\mathrm{A}, \mathrm{yfcl}$ and n' $\mathrm{y} d=$ 'affliction and distress'; in passage B, yfel gnornode nydsefera = 'afflicted, mourned the companion of sorrow'; in passage C, cene and yfel='the bold warrior and the afflicted wretch.'

May not the name yfel have been suggested by the name of the $W$-Rune, i.e. zwinn, 'joy,' being a sort of antithesis to it? The letter $y$ would probably at first have followed $w$ immediately in Runic alphabets arranged in the order of the Roman letters, before a special symbol was found for the double letter $x$. In Scandinavian alphabets no separate sign occurs for this latter sound, which is represented by the runes for $h s$.
3. $N$-Rune. The interpretation of this rune is simple. A, regards passage $\Lambda, \mathrm{N}=n^{\prime} d=$ 'necessity, hardship,' $Y$ and $\boldsymbol{N}$ being the subject of meahtan. As regards B, the authorities vary on the question of the continuation of $n y^{\prime} d$ and gefera; Grimm reads $N$ gefera nearu sorge dreah; Ettmüller, $N$ gefera, nearusorge dreah; Kemble, $N$ gefere, nearu sorge dreah; Grein, Zupitza, etc., nydgefera, etc. The point of the expression nyd. gefera is, I think, that it serves the purpose of a double entendre; the poet uses it not merely to express its literal meaning 'the companion of sorrow ;' 'yfel' (i.e. the $Y$-Rune) may well be described as nyd-gefera, i.e. 'the companion of the $N$-Rune' in the poet's name, (cp. gefera as a technical word in Elfric's Grammar, zuordes gefera = an adverb.)

A similar double entendre occurs, I think, in the next line; enge rune $=(1)$ nearu-sorge, 'a constraining sorrow'; (2) a description of the $N$-Rune, 'the narrow rune,' $\neq$; in 'Cynewulf' this 'narrow rune' comes between two especially wide ones; hence, perhaps, the special point of the words.

In C, ' $N$ liges' is the excellent reading suggested by Sievers ; the letters are obliterated in the MS.
4. E-Rune. In $A$ and $C$ this rune does not occur, and it would seem that the poet styled himself in these passages 'Cynwulf,' and not 'Cynewulf' (on the philological aspect of the form 'Cynwulf,' see Sievers' remarks, Ansclia xiii.). Thorpe noted concerning A that the absence of the rune $E$, and the want of connection in the sense, proved the loss of a couplet between zurapra wita and bipse; Grein similarly suggested the insertion of a line containing an $E$-Rune,

> ' iwazt him after derdum deman wuille [on pam E.fullan dege engla dryhten] worabra wita,' interpreting 'E. full' = eh.full, = egefull, 'terribilis,' (usually $E$ $=c h$, 'equus'). But the passage makes perfect sense without any interpolation, and the discovery of passage C corroborates this view; the space between nearoue and [a]ninges peodon would not suffice for more than the words containing the $N$-Rune, as Sievers has pointed out in the article referred to above. Professor Napier was originally of opinion that the oblterated passage might have contained the $E$-Rune as well as the $N$-Runc. ${ }^{1}$

In A, wrapra wita is, of course, the partitive genitive after havat; the subject of zeillc is clear in both A and I); the identity of expression in the two passages is remarkable.

The $E$-Rune in $\mathrm{B}=e h$, 'horse '; the word fore that follows the rune has been vaiously interpreted-(1) as an adverb formerly; (2) as a preposition governing him; (3) =fore, 'on the journey.' I prefer (2) 'before nim'; the poet, I take it, was filled with grief when he watched the hunt, but could not join in it ; otherw'ise the passage must mean, 'where once he had joined in the delights of the hunt, he now wandered sorrow-laden.'
5. W-Kune. The proper name of this rune $=z w n$, i.e. 'joy'; this name of the letter is given in the Salzburg Runic Alphabet, and an interesting piece of additional evidence exists, in the fuct that jubilitate is glossed P sumiap, i.e. wynsumia), in the Ninety-ninth Psalm of the Oxford Interlinear Version, MS. Junius 27, (as pointed out by Professor Logeman ;) uuinne is also the name of the Gothic letter in the Salzburg MS. A dialectical variety of $w y^{\prime} n=$ wenn, which was probably identified with wén, i.e. 'hope'; hence the latter interpretation of the name of the rune. In the Runic poem the lines on $W$ run as follows :-

- wo (wen) ne brucet, ore can weana tyt, sares and sorge,' etc.

If the rune is interpreted as wén = 'hope' in this passage, it is impossible to understand the lines; but wen ne $=$ wenne $=$ wynne, genitive of $w y n$, after brucep. Similarly in the Rhyme Poem, l. 76 :-

[^8]ISO

' bonme lichorza lives . Itma wyrm frite\
ac him wen re gewize0,' etc.

there, too, wen re $=$ wenthe $=$ wynte.
In passage $A, B, C$, the rune is clearly to be interpreted wynn; Grein renders it $z^{6} n$ in $A$, zen $=\pi y n n$ in $B$, Napier interpreted the rune in C as wen, Sievers as $\neq y n n$ (see Angita xiii.). The letters of the alphabet in Anglo-Saxon are masculine; hence se W., although wynn is feminine.
$U$-Rune. The name of the rune in the Runic Alphabets $=$ ur, interpreted to mean 'a bul\},' cp. Runic Poem, l. 4 :-
$U(u r)$ bib anmod and ofer-hyrned,
'the bull is fierce with horns above his bead.'
The rune in $\mathrm{A}, \mathrm{B}$, and C , has baffled the ingenuity of commentators. As regards A, Kemble, Thorpe, and Grein, take the letter to represent úr, formerly; but the adverb does not occur in Anglo-Saxon; its equivalent, or, is used only as a prefix; and although at first sight it seems that some adverb must be understood in this place, the objections against tir are insurmountable; I had thought it possible that perhajs is, 'formerly,' might have stood, but I retract this view now. As regards the rune in B, Grimm takes it merely as the letter $U$, and makes it represent the whole name of the poet-'Cynewulf war ehemals die wonne der jugend'; Kemble, ' $U$ (I was of old) a gleam of youth'; Leo, úr=ór, 'sonst war gold der jugendzeit wonneglanz'; Grein interprets B in the same way as A, 'olim'; Zupitza, t'r= 'auerochse'; the scholars that interpret the rune as equivalent to ur, 'bull,' take it to mean 'property' in general, comparing the use of feor, but there is absolutely no evidence in favour of this view, and Sievers' interpretation of $U$ on exle in C, 'das gut im erbsitze,' seems to me untenable. The only Anglo-Saxon word that will satisfy the three passages seems to be the possessive pronoun zir, 'our'; Dr. Cosijn (in 'Verslagen en mededeelingen der koninklijke Akademie van Wetenschappen, Aideeling Letterkunde,' pp. 54-64) suggested the possibility of this interpretation, noting that $u r$ is a frequent form of the pronoun in the Vespasian Psalter; but more important evidence in favour of the view exists in the fact that is a Riunic Alphabet (Domition.
$A$, 9) the rune is actually glossed 'noster.' It is strange that this point has not been noticed; it confirms the probability. The alphabet in question is printed in Hicke's, p. $\mathbf{1} 36$. Finally, therefore, $\mathrm{A}=$ úr . . . lifuynna dal; $\mathrm{B}=$ ur . . . gcogoshades glem; C=uir winn on êle. In A 'longe'='long ago'; cp. Ex. 557, 'wile nu gelestan, pat he lange gehet.' I take it that the words in A refer to the Deluge. With the phrase zoynn on esle in C, cp. Rune Poem. l. $3^{8-}$ > coh byb . . . zuyn on eble.

7, 8. L and F call for no special comment ; the name of the former, lagu, and of the latter, feoh, fit the passages in which they occur.

In the following rendering of the passages in question I have attempted to bring out the peculiar force of the original. In A, B, C, the Runic letters (i.e. their Roman equivalents) CYNE WULF stand respectively for the following words:-Cen(e), yfel, nyd, eh, wynn, úr, lagu, féoh ; their English equivalents are printed in italics.

A.

C. Then the Keen shall quake ; he shall hear the Lord, the heaven's Ruler, utter words of wrath to those who in the world obeyed Him ill, $\mathbf{Y} \cdot \mathbf{N} \cdot$ while afliction and distress most easily might find solace. There many afeared shall wearily await upon that plain what dire penalty He will adjudge to them,
$\mathbf{W}$ according to their deeds. The winsomeness of earthy gauds
U. shall then be changed. Long time ago our portion of life's joys
L. was all encompassed by zeater-floods,
F. yea, all our possessions upon earth; then each precious thing shall be consumed in fire.

B.

Till then was nought but discontent,-
C. a bold warrior, drooping with age, buffeted by waves of care,- yea, though in the mead-hall he recejved precious gifts, $\mathbf{Y} \cdot \mathbf{N}$ • apple-shaped gold. In his affiction, sorrow's comrade murmured ; grief, the narrowing rune,
E. constrained him, when he beheld the horse measuring the mile-paths, rushing proudly on,
W. decked with adornments. Joy is now lessened, and delight, after many a year ; youth is gone,
U- the pride of old. Ours was once youth's glorious radiance ; now, at appointed time, those days of yore have passed away,
L. life's joy hath departed, as the waters ebb, the rushing floods. Transitory 'neath heaven
F. is the wealth of every man.

C.

A man of cunning thought may here discover, if he taketh pleasure in song,
F . who wrought this lay. Wealth cometh last, the friend of man on earth, while he dwelleth in the world, but they cannot keep together always.
$\mathbf{U} \cdot \mathbf{W} \cdot$ Our earthly joy shall fade, and the frail gauds of the flesh
L. shall afterwards decay, even as water glideth away.
$\mathbf{C} \cdot \mathbf{Y} \cdot$ Bold warrior and afficted wretch shall then crave help, $\mathbf{N}$ - in the anxious watches of the night ; but Destiny o'errules, the King exacts their service. Now thou canst know, who was revealed to men in these words.

D.

Sad shall depart $\mathbf{C} \cdot \mathbf{Y}$ and $\mathbf{N} \cdot$; the King will be stern, the Bestower of victory, when, $\sin$-stained, $\mathbf{E} \cdot \mathbf{W}$ and $\mathbf{U} \cdot$ trembling shall await what He will adjudge to them, according to their deeds, as life's reward; $\mathbf{L} \cdot \mathbf{F}$ 'shall quake, and linger sorrowful. All the pain I shall remember, the wounds of the sins, which I, early or late, wrought in the world.

[^0]:    ${ }^{1}$ From the Gnomic Verses of the Exeter Book; the rime is a mere accident of the translation.

[^1]:    ${ }^{1}$ From The W'anderer, 'Exeter Book.'

[^2]:    ${ }^{1}$ The system of punctuation employed has no ms. authority, neither have the capital letters at the beginning of the lines; there is no break between the lines in the ms., where the poem is written throughout as if prose. I have not marked the letters expanded; the accents are reproduced from the ms.

[^3]:    ${ }^{1}$ Thorpe's Codex Exomiensis appcared just fifty years ago. Unfortunately, he failed to see the value of 'the first 106 pages' of his book (i.e. the portion containing the present poem); his comment ran as follows:-'Though interesting to the philologist, they possess little altraction for any other class of readers. The pieces they contain are, no doubt, translations from the Latin; but their subject is not of a nature to stimulate many to search after the originals, which, if discovered, would prove of litule use in elucidating the

[^4]:    ${ }^{1}$ Cf. Ten Brink, Early English Literature, PP. 51-59, and Appendix.
    ${ }^{2}$ Quoted by Samuel Daniel in his Defence of Ryme, concerning 'Aldelmus Durotelmus, of whom we find this commendation registered'; the lines vecur in an interesting passage on the learning of Saxon England, whence, 100, the quotation that heads this Introduction. If only the old Elizabethans had known of Cynewulf.

[^5]:    ${ }^{1}$ Napier reads awa cardion, but there is no space in MS. ; I follow Sievers' arrangement; v. Anglia, xiii. pp. 1-25.
    ${ }^{2}$ Napier, to-hreosab.

[^6]:    ${ }^{1}$ Napier, swa; Sievers, bonne (?). $\quad$ MS. ncotas; Sievers, neosa§.
